CNC Pipe Centre Blunt

The CNC Pipe Centre Blunt is a precision-engineered workholding accessory designed to support hollow pipes, tubular components, and other suitable workpieces during CNC machining operations. Its blunt contact design helps provide stable support for applications where a pointed centre is not suitable.

Features

- Precision-engineered blunt contact design.
- Suitable for supporting hollow pipes and tubular workpieces.
- Designed for compatible CNC turning applications.

- Helps maintain workpiece stability during machining.
- Heavy-duty construction for industrial use.
- Supports consistent workpiece positioning.
- Suitable for appropriate pipe-supporting operations.
- Designed for compatibility with specified machine interfaces.
- Helps reduce unwanted workpiece movement.
- Built for reliable workshop performance.

Description

Overview

The CNC Pipe Centre Blunt is a precision-engineered workholding accessory designed to support hollow pipes, tubular components, and other suitable workpieces during CNC machining operations. Its blunt contact design helps provide stable support for applications where a pointed centre is not suitable.

Common Uses

The CNC Pipe Centre Blunt is commonly used in CNC turning and pipe-machining applications where hollow or tubular workpieces require suitable end support. It is useful in engineering workshops, industrial manufacturing facilities, and pipe production environments for supporting compatible components during machining. The correct centre type, mounting interface, dimensions, and load capacity should be selected according to the machine and workpiece specifications.
