Description

Overview

The Lathe Vibration Support is a machine-support accessory designed to reduce vibration, movement, and shock transmission during lathe operations. It provides stable support between the lathe and its foundation, helping improve machining stability, accuracy, and overall machine performance.

Common Uses

The Banka Lathe Vibration Support is widely used beneath centre lathes, heavy-duty lathes, precision lathes, CNC lathes, and workshop machines to provide stable machine support and reduce vibration, movement, and shock transmission during turning operations. It is an essential machine-installation accessory for machine shops, production workshops, tool rooms, manufacturing units, and precision engineering facilities, where stable machine operation, reduced vibration, improved turning accuracy, better surface finish, and reliable long-term support are essential.
